

Coproduction Conference 2025 Pledges

To be more excited about co-production!

To meet with Andree to explore co-production projects

I pledge to take what I have learnt today forward in my work as a Peer Mentor

To continue to advocate for co-production

To discuss issues with new audiences

Seize opportunities to build relationships with people

I pledge to ensure that I do my best in every way to ensure co-pro

I will build in more space for co-production into the service I work with, considering further how we can increase communication and trust with clients

Looking at other services for support

I will seek out a new community group to connect with

I will make sure that co-production is at the heart of the team I'm in

I will take this away and think about how my team could be part of a co-production team

I plan to be a part of this piece of work to help in any way I can going forward to see it happen and be done well

I will change the way we think about co-production as a team in the service

I will seek new ways to meet communities where it's comfortable for them

To continue to advocate for the importance of co-production and peer support

I will continue to attend and participate in co-production from a lived experience perspective

I will keep working to increase meaningful coproduction across the service I work for

Encourage colleagues to be more curious and open to co-production in a genuine manner

Embed coproduction into future funding bids and projects

To prioritise implementing co-production in our small team

I pledge to be transparent and open through this difficult time

I will use my relationships with commissioners and leaders to influence the prioritisation of co-design and co-production

To encourage individual agency in establishing communities of care, combating loneliness

I will support colleagues with lived experience to share their expertise within the team and beyond to other services

Live long and prosper

To include voices that are often left out

To continue to advocate for coproduction at a system level

I pledge to share the learning from today's event with the rest of my team when back at the Hospice

To advocate for co-production, its principles and the LE perspective in all areas of work

To place lived experience people with our trustees, to share aspects of their journey and challenges

Continue to chip away

I will prioritise co-production in the further development process of the East health hub

I commit to putting people with lived experience (clients, staff, and stakeholders) at the centre of every decision I make in my role

How can I persuade senior management teams to add a peer support/lived experience line to each budget and protect that line so that money is not used on bank staff

Advocate for service user involvement in all parts of a process/service delivery and inclusive engagement design as default, and honesty when it's not co-production

I will monitor the development of client forums, supporting the prioritisation of them in operations and ensuring they are adequately resourced

I will continue to champion the voice of people with lived experience and look at ways to further invest in developing people-led projects, work & initiatives

I will speak with our team about our commitment and plans for coproduction

I will become more involved with other groups

I will insist clients are present in planning/developments from the beginning

To prioritise sharing coproduction best practice with the Sussex MH VCSE Network

I will maintain the courage to actively advocate for co-production within the organisations I work for as well as those I use and seek out my fellow pirates.

Discuss the idea of reverse mentoring with SPFT staff

I will help to co-produce resources from the conference day to share with all attendees

I will start a discussion in my team - why do you fear coproduction?

I will speak about this principle to my board

To recognise that coproduction involves a lot of different special interests

For me coproduction starts with good quality relationships. I will be more mindful of bringing this attitude into all my work interactions

Pledge to support coproduction, continue support for coproduction

Keep on learning and sharing co-production in the communities I network with

To embrace events like this and look forward to them rather than be nervous of them

I will continue to work towards embedding co-production in as many places and spaces as possible

Here are the key headlines from the pledges made at the conference:

Championing Co-Production: Advocating for, embedding, and prioritising co-production in services, projects, and decision-making.

Building Relationships & Networks: Meeting new groups, fostering trust, and strengthening collaborations.

Influencing Change: Using leadership and commissioner relationships to prioritise co-production and co-design.

Embedding Lived Experience: Ensuring people with lived experience have a voice in decision-making, governance, and service planning.

Encouraging Peer Support & Mentoring: Supporting colleagues with lived experience and advocating for peer-led initiatives.

Increasing Awareness & Learning: Sharing knowledge, discussing challenges, and promoting best practices within teams and organisations.

Challenging Mindsets: Addressing fears around co-production and encouraging open, curious attitudes.

Practical Implementation: Incorporating co-production into funding bids, budgets, and operational strategies.

Sustaining & Expanding Co-Production Efforts: Continuing to advocate, learn, and push for meaningful participation in all areas.
